A Few Facts About Gould Academy

On June 19, 1796, Samuel Adams, Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, signed the bill presented to him by the legislature which provided that the plantation known as Sudbury Canada be incorporated as the Town of Bethel.

Until, 1836, boys and girls of the new town who desired education other than that to be obtained in the common schools were forced to go over to Hebron or Bridgton or to some school of their choice. To this day they still have the same privilege. By 1835 the people of Bethel felt that it would be less expensive and more convenient to have a school of their own, so started a high school. Thirty-five students entered, soon there were 85. There wasn't room in the school house, so they moved to the ell of the old Bethel House. Next year 123 were eager for knowledge.

Meanwhile, a group of enterprising men (John Grover, Moses Mason, Timothy Carter, William Frye, Charles Frost, Jedidiah Burbank, John Hastings, Stephen Emery, Barbour Bartlett, James Walker, Levi Whitman, Robbins Brown, Valentine Little, George W. Chapman, Phineas Frost, Timothy Hastings, Robert A. Chapman) decided to start a private school. They successfully petitioned the state legislature for an act of incorporation as Bethel Academy. They wrangled among themselves as to the site for a building but finally purchased the land upon which the present Academy stands from Henry and James Stevens. By 1836 a new enterprise had been established in town. Six years later, the Rev. Daniel Gould, who had been for a few years the pastor of the West Parish church, offered them a legacy if they would change the name to Gould Academy. The trustees voted to accept the gift with conditions and successfully petitioned the state legislature for a change of name. In 1890 there was much talk of changing to the high school system, but the majority of trustees voted to continue as before.

There are several types of schools throughout New England of a private school nature, many of which over the years have changed their original organization. But from its inception in 1836 until now Gould Academy has remained a non-contract school a completely privately controlled non-profit educational institution. It has a self-perpetuating board of trustees of from 11 to 23 members who annually elect their own executive committee. It has no contract of any kind with the town of Bethel, so local boys and girls today, as always, can go to any school of their choice in the state, and the town will pay toward their expenses whatever portion of the cost that the state of Maine allows. Just as our young people have no obligation to attend Gould if they do not choose to do so, so Gould has no legal obligations to accept any or all of them students; but seldom, if ever, has anyone ever been refused admittance. The limited capacities of the dormitories compared to the number of classrooms and other facilities has always placed great emphasis on providing the best possible secondary education for Bethel.

Although a non-contract school is privately operated, it is subject

U. S. Senator Frederick Payne

Senator Payne To Seek Renomination

Senator Frederick G. Payne (R-Maine) issued the following statement in Washington Tuesday.

"I shall be a candidate for renomination for the office of United States Senator in the June 16th Republican Primary and have today requested the Secretary of State for nomination papers.

"Since my earlier decision not to seek reelection, thousands of my fellow citizens have urged me to reconsider if my health permitted. My health today is better than it has been in several years and will be no obstacle to my candidacy and, if successful, to serving another six years in the Senate.

"With the challenge which faces our Nation today on both the international and domestic fronts, it is my belief that the experience I have gained during my years of public service will make it possible for me to be of continued constructive service during another term in the United States Senate if that is the wish of my fellow citizens."

INFORMATION BOOKLET EXPLAINS FORM 1040

The information booklet which accompanied the 1957 Federal income tax form 1040 recently received by Maine taxpayers, is again keyed to the format of the return, District Director Whitney L. Wheeler of the Internal Revenue Service said today. The Revenue Service adopted this more convenient presentation of information concerning the tax form a year ago.

"Taxpayers last year found this new approach to tax information and instruction a big improvement, as they did the new and more attractive typography, better paper, and other changes which were made in the instruction booklet," he said.

"The Revenue Service has attempted to simplify instructions even further. Of course the taxpayer now realizes that no one booklet could provide him with effective answers to all the thousands of situations which may relate to the returns.

"Because we know there will be additional problems, we are again offering extensive telephone assistance, and office aid where needed. A call to Manhattan 7-2271 is probably the best bet for the average taxpayer who finds himself confronted with a problem he can't resolve from the booklet, or from one of our tax guides."

Pedestrians Advised to "Accept Responsibility"

"The intelligent pedestrian realizes that cautious conduct in winter traffic is the best to survive to be a live pedestrian in the spring," our Maine Highway Safety Committee cautions. "In other words, now, more than ever, self-reliance is a heavy factor in the safety of those who walk in traffic."

The committee emphasized that poor visibility, more hours of darkness, uncertain weather, and slippery road conditions add greatly to the difficulties of motorists at this time of year. Sometimes, drivers have difficulty coming to a sudden stop on ice or snow-covered road surfaces.

"There is no substitute for caution and common sense," continued the committee. "Traffic regulations and laws are designed to protect walkers and drivers. However, there are times when blind faith in these regulatory measures is an invitation to disaster. It is always wise to be self-reliant in traffic and, at this time of year, with the forces of nature conspiring to make the job of the motor vehicle operator doubly difficult, it is foolhardy to place too much dependence in his ability to stop his car."

The committee listed five safe winter walking rules:

1. Accept responsibility for your own safety walking in traffic.
2. Remember the driver's job is a mighty tough one—give him a break.
3. Obey all traffic lights and signs and cross at intersections only.
5. Wear something white and carry a light at night as a warning to approaching cars.
6. Allow plenty of time to cross the street. Remember, the street surface probably is slippery. Walk with great care.

ideas from other editors

From The Catskill Mountain Mail: Saugerties, New York: Time was when the milkman was "the man nobody knew" He came in the predawn darkness, and only the milk on the doorstep gave evidence of his visit. Now that he works during the day like a normal citizen, it develops that he is the most popular salesman.

Results of a nation-wide survey of milk consumers, revealed at the 50th annual convention of the Milk Industry Foundation, have inspired an industry spokesman to proclaim ecstatically, "The American Homemaker just loves her milkman" . . . and to add quickly, "But husbands needn't get jealous —it's purely platonic."

Six out of ten housewives reporting that they had opportunities for chatting with the milkman rated him "above average" in friendliness and courtesy compared with other sales people. Four out of ten said he was "average," none rated him lower. In loyalty and integrity, the report was the same.

It seems possible that this attitude had much to do with the further fact that 64 per cent of all those interviewed considered milk the most nutritious of all foods, and that these consumers ranked milk at the top of the six foods—milk, meat, bread, cereals, frozen foods, coffee—as the biggest money's worth and the most dependable of comestibles. There would also seem to be a connection between the personable milkman and the fact that those who have it delivered drink more milk (an average ten quarts a week) than those who buy it at the store (six quarts).

It is a pleasant thing in this day and age when too many people are too busy hating each other, to find that friendliness and honesty are not only recognized and appreciated, but are actually rewarding to their possessors. Further, the evidence suggests that it might be at least a small gesture toward world peace if the representatives of all the various and sundry enterprises who contact the American home were to emulate the purveyors of milk. Brings to mind, in fact, that old-fashioned expression, "the milk of human kindness."

From The Remington Press, Remington, Indiana: Almost any kind of weather can be encountered, as changeable as things are at this season and particularly where long distances are involved. Too tight a schedule should not be set up, because an attempt to make time under adverse conditions might bring disaster.

Economic Highlights . . . . .

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

The winds of controversy have blown around the Supreme Court on a good many occasions since this government was established—the Dred Scott decision, which almost literally tore the country in two, being perhaps the outstanding example. The controversy has been intense again in the last year, as all readers of the news know. The decisions in cases affecting communists and others have stirred up great debates and high passions on either side. A revealing article on the Court has appeared in the New York Times Magazine written by Anthony Lewis of the Times' Washington bureau. He does not deal with the merits or demerits of the controversial decisions. His purpose is to help explain the mechanics of the Court's operation for, as he says, "the public has very little idea how the Supreme Court makes up its mind."

The first step is for the justices to decide whether to accept or to refuse a case. Since 1,500 petitions are filed with the Court each term only a small percentage are heard. A writ may be granted and can be denied. But in other instances there is wide disagreement among the members. It takes the votes of four justices to bring a case up for review and, when that is done, the Court sets a later date for oral argument.

Then the records in the case are filed. They may total thousands of pages. As Justice Jackson once said, no judge can get through more than a fraction. It is a matter of up to each justice to decide how much of what he must read and how to split each case up. Here Mr. Lewis has an important observation. "In any [illegible] the Supreme Court reacts to a case depends, inevitably, to a large degree on the view of life and society that he has built up in a lifetime." One man, for instance, may abhor wiretapping under any circumstances; another may see a need for it in certain instances.

The next step is to hear the oral arguments of the opposing attorneys. These are restricted to an hour or less for each side, but they are enormously important. Justice Harlan has said that they may "make the difference between winning and losing, no matter how good the briefs are." Then the justices discuss the cases in conference and a vote is taken. Finally, the writing of opinions is assigned to specific justices. Individual justices can, and frequently do, write additional opinions to express their own particular views.

It is the sources of these opinions that make the Supreme Court so different from other and lower courts—and which, no doubt, cause many a confusion in the minds of laymen. Mr. Lewis goes into this matter in detail. The decisions quote legal precedents, but they are not restricted to them. As Mr. Lewis puts it: " a Supreme Court opinion may quote Presidents as well as judges, Senators as well as statutes. It may find in the history of Greece aids to the temporary resolution of the eternal struggle between freedom and order. It may derive lessons from the lengthy battle to establish legal guarantees in Great Britain. It may give weight to the views of economists, or the scholarly analyses in law reviews."

What it all amounts to is that the justices are individuals of widely varying backgrounds and philosophies placed in positions of almost unlimited legal authority. Hence the differences and hence the controversies and passions.

Mrs. Bessie Harvey, Correspondent

Fred Bennett, who was quite ill last week, is much better. He had Dr. Brooks of Colebrook come in on Wednesday.

There seems to be an epidemic going around of intestinal disorder added to colds.

Miss Elizabeth Gilman returned from East Holden, Maine, recently where she had visited since before Thanksgiving and is again keeping house for Joseph Mooney.

A birthday party for Mrs. Mabel Cameron was held at her home on Jan. 13. It was her 89th birthday. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. Donald Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. Ewen Cameron, Mrs. Madeline Mathieson, Mrs. Dean Howard and son, Cameron, also Mrs. Virginia Lane. It was also her son's, A. Donald Cameron's, birthday. He was 66 years old. Each had nice gifts and many cards. Mrs. Lane made the lovely birthday cake.

There was a bad accident last Thursday just above Bill Bryant's camps. Two trucks collided there and each was damaged severely. Both drivers were injured, one very badly. He suffered a crushed chest and a broken nose.

The snow storms of last week made driving hazardous and snowplows went day and night.

Twenty-two below this Monday morning with the wind blowing hard.

Eugene Vaughn, one of the twin sons of Mr and Mrs. Fay Vaughn, was taken to Hanover, N. H., by his mother last week where a tumor was removed from his arm.

Miss Kathy Harvey is ill at home with a stomach upset.

The hot debate over recent Supreme Court decision led U. S. News & World Report to state: "What the country is seeing is a great and growing struggle between the three co-ordinate branches of the Federal Government. A comparable struggle has not been seen in this century."

Tests Demonstrate How Seat Belts Save Lives

By Joanne Smith, Dodge Safety Consultant

IF YOU'VE EVER WATCHED stock car races, you're familiar with the hair-raising spills and collisions which many of these drivers experience—and then step out of their cars, wave to the crowd—and walk away, unhurt.

Likewise, in accidents affecting modern military aircraft, the personnel frequently walk away with hardly a scratch.

Miss Smith

In both cases, the reason why occupants survive these accidents without injury is because they are protected by seat belts which prevent them from being hurled against instrument panels or through windshields.

Last month at Holloman Air Force Base, Alamogordo, N.M., I saw how seat belts can also curb passenger car injuries. (Some estimates indicate that seat belts could prevent more than one million automobile injuries and 20,000 deaths per year.)

More than 100 automotive, medical and safety experts watched simulated car "crashes" at the third annual Automotive Crash and Field Demonstration Conference. The tests, which were conducted by Col. John P. Stapp, Director of Holloman's Aero-Medical Field Laboratory, involved humans, animals and dummies, who were catapulted into quick, hydraulic braking stops similar to the impacts of auto collisions. (Col. Stapp has traveled faster on the ground than any other human—nearly 632 miles an hour.)

In one deceleration test, a bear wearing a safety seat belt was subjected to a measured impact equivalent to 25 times the force of gravity. Although the force of the impact threw the bear's head and shoulders forward, he was not thrown from his seat—thanks to the belt.

Air Force doctors, who examined the bear before and after the test, found that he had not been injured, either externally or internally, by the jolt.

In another test, an Air Force captain, restrained by a safety seat belt, went through a similar demonstration without injury. The "crash" in which he participated was equivalent to a car being braked from 17 miles an hour to a stop in six seconds, at a deceleration rate of 27 times the force of gravity.

The impact was similar to a car's head-on crash into a concrete wall at 30 or 35 miles per hour or a side-collision with another car at 50 to 55 miles per hour.

A third test duplicated the one in which the captain participated, except that it was manned by a dummy, without a seat belt. When subjected to the same shocking stop which the captain survived without injury, the unrestrained dummy was thrown 13 feet.

These, and other demonstrations, vividly point up how seat belts can be the solution to our traffic injury problem.

MAN'S RECIPE

Sunny Acres Soft Chocolate Cookie

Pare of mind and reasonable contentment with the status quo are essential to happy living. My mind is more peaceful and my attitude more content if a well-filled cookie jar is constantly available.

I have a Master's degree from Harvard and was exposed to a number of complex psychological courses. If you insisted I could cite quite a number of multi-syllable words. But Harvard professors never stressed some of life's most significant psychological angles, such as a cookie jar with good cookies. Mother used to say that the child are how I could eat so many cookies and still maintain my slender figure. Actually Blanche makes a comment to the same effect. When I come in from an afternoon's work on the farm, I enjoy a few of today's recipe with a glass of skim milk. That is practical psychology; take calories in the cookies and assuage one's conscience with skim milk.

Use one and a third cups flour, one half teaspoon soda, one third teaspoon salt, one third cup white sugar, one half cup shortening, one and a fourth cups light brown sugar firm packed, one egg beaten, two and a half squares chocolate melted, one half teaspoon almond extract, one half teaspoon vanilla, one half cup sour milk, one cup chopped walnuts.

Sift the flour, soda, salt and white sugar.

In a second bowl, cream shortening and brown sugar, and then add the beaten egg with which has been mixed the melted chocolate, almond extract and vanilla.

Add the sour milk to the egg and shortening mixture and beat for a minute or two.

Add this mix to the flour in the first bowl and blend all well. Then beat for another minute or so. Add the nuts and mix.

Drop by teaspoon on greased cookie sheet.

Bake at 375 about 15 minutes, or until done. Be careful not to overbake.

THE FAILURES OF COMMUNISM

What has communism accomplished? A terse and compelling answer to that question is provided by the distinguished historian and teacher Hamel Hoe in his new book "The American Cause" which the Chicago Era of Reason has published.

He says: "Although the Communists have practiced brutality to promote their cause, murdered many millions of innocent people. Although the Communists have created absolute equality they have established absolute chaos as well. Although the Communists have used violence to gain ability to exist they have resorted to theft and confiscation to attain it. Although the Communists have promised liberty, they have created worse enslavement than ever existed before. Although they have talked constantly of peace they have thrived by war.

"Communism is a philosophy of the underworld. Communists are unable to create but can only exist by living off the productive labor of others. As a child of the devil and Communism will destroy itself. Communism is the most evil force in the world today. It must be destroyed. It takes a thief to catch a thief. It takes the Communists to destroy Communism. The American people can do it. It takes the United States Army and Navy about 10 minutes to capture a whole city of Communists. It takes the American people about 10 minutes to capture a whole city of Communists. It takes the American people about 10 minutes to capture a whole city of Communists. It takes the American people

Cleveland, O. Daily Times: "... Wladyslaw Gomulka, Polish leader who in 1956 was a strong reed of resistance to Moscow, this year decided he had to suppress a critical student newspaper and impose other press curbs. The reaction was quick and violent. That the Poles dared to act thus was a measure of their defiant strength. It suggests, too, that the rebellious spirit there and in the other satellites is never far beneath the surface."

GOULD ACADEMY

Farmington Takes Gould

Could put up a close battle as the 8-8 and 21-22 scores indicate, for the first half. In the third period an all over press by the Greyhounds proved successful as Gould was held to 9 points while Farmington scored 24 to go out front 47-30. The final period was close with Gould scoring 11 points; but the winners increased their lead by one point with 12 more in the final stanza to win easily 59-41.

Tim Race with 16 and Steve Smith with 13 points were the only G. A. players to score over five points. Dyer and Davis scored 12 each for Farmington but had more scoring punch from their teammates.

The Gould J.V.s lost their first game of the year but only after two thrilling overtime periods. Pete Wheeler was the outstanding scorer with 22 points, ably assisted by John Cole with 12.

Preliminary Farmington 42 Gould 40

Change in Play Date

The three plays originally scheduled for February 14 will be presented instead on February 13th in Hannon Hall, all part of the carnival weekend.

Norway at Gould Friday

After four games in a row away from home the Huskies will return to the home court to entertain Norway High in a double header. The J.V. game is scheduled for 6:30. It will be the first meeting of the undefeaters.

The varsity game, starting at 8:00 p. m. finds the home club attempting to break even with the Norwegians. Norway won the preholiday game on the Norway Armory floor by a 52-39 score. The visitors will be fighting to maintain their fourth place position in the Western Maine Conference.

The Huskies have an open date on Tuesday, which should give them an opportunity to work on some of the weaknesses showing since the holidays.

THREE MAINE COUNTIES SCORE RECORD DEER KILLS

Three northern Maine counties produced record deer kills during the 1957 hunting season, according to announcement from Russ Carmo of Kents Hill, Game Division Chief of the Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Game.

Nimrods bagged more whitetails than ever before in Aroostook, Piscataquis, and Somerset Counties. Some of the upstate increase may be credited to construction of new logging roads by pulp and timber companies.

Cut-throughs in wilderness areas during recent years have opened thousands of acres previously inaccessible wilderness country, attracting hunters and fishermen from all parts of Maine and from many states throughout the country.

Aroostook County experienced a 17½ percent increase over the 1956 season, Piscataquis a jump of slightly over 14 percent. Hunters in Somerset County bagged eight percent more deer than in 1956.

County by county, however, Penobscot again scored the high-total kill (5,144). Second highest total kill per county was registered by Aroostook (4,285). Third highest kill took place in Somerset County (4,132).

Of the official figure of 40,142 deer registered by hunters in the 1957 season, males number 22,499 and females totaled 17,643. Statewide kill in 1957 represented 1.32 deer per square mile.

The 1957 statewide deer kill was third highest on record. Hunters bagged 40,290 deer during the previous 1956 season, second highest total. The all-time Maine record of 41,730 whitetailed deer was established in 1951.

4-H NEWS

By Russell E. Clark

You'll remember the young man who won the bicycle in the Oxford County 4-H Cucumber Growers contest. Well, Arnold Turner, of South Paris, has done it again. It was announced that he is the third place state winner in the Processing Crops Division of the Production and Marketing contest.

Arnold's award will be presented, along with other state Production and Marketing contest awards, at the Farm and Home Week program at the University of Maine, the first week in April.

The Busy Workers, of Canton, are really working this winter. They are remodeling their club house at Canton Point. The building was a school at one time and later converted to a fire station. The boys are removing a partition that divided the building and have partitioned off a woodshed. While the boys do the carpentry work, the girls have been sewing dish towels, cleaning the hall and cupboards, and served delicious dinners for the hard-working club members.

The 4-H demonstration tournaments are coming up this month. The schedule for tournaments is as follows:

Bethel, January 24:—Congregational Church Vestry. Clubs involved: Lucky Clover, Lucky Thirteen, Lucky Horseshoe, Hanover Hustle Bustle, Hanover Projectors, Upton Mountain Rangers, Busy Beavers.

South Paris, January 27—Good Cheer Hall of Universalist Church. Clubs involved: Busy Workers, Willing Dairy Workers, Hungry Hollow Hie Hoe, Jolly Girls, Sumner Valley, Future Homemakers, Country Cardinals, Chickadees.

South Paris, January 28—Fire Hall. Clubs involved: Humming Birds, East Oxford Hilltoppers, Pine Tree Girls, Pine Tree Boys, Norway Center Whizzers, Saco Valley, Ready Workers.

The public is invited to attend these tournaments and see 4-H members demonstrate some of the things they are learning in 4-H.

Winners at these sectional tournaments will compete later in the county tournament.

Your Washington Report

by Congressman Robert Hale
First Maine District

Defense Spending—Congress is in no penny-pinching mood this year. This is obvious from the reaction to President Eisenhower's $73.9 billion federal budget.

The President has asked for $45.8 billion or 62 per cent of the total budget, for major national security items for peacetime. Yet some people say even this is not enough.

A degree of caution should be exercised however. Adequate spending to meet the challenge of our times. Over and mere reckless spending. We could double expenditures and still not derive additional benefit from them if they were wasted.

Those who advocate even greater spending must remember that many of our new weapons are still in the experimental stage. Money can accomplish only so much in this phase. The rest is up to our scientists and technicians. We must and shall spend all that is necessary but we must do so wisely and realistically. This is the test that should be applied to the President's budget.

Maine Benefits—The fiscal 1959 budget may give a shot in the arm to the economic health of Maine. For example, proposed new ship-building includes guided-missile destroyers, the first nuclear-powered frigate, and three ballistic missile submarines. I shall do everything possible to see that both Bath and Kittery benefit from these new building programs.

Other proposals include some money for SAGE installations like the one at Topsham, $615,000 to complete the Passamaquoddy tidal power study, and large sums for highways, education, fishery research and the weather bureau.

Small Business—The President also recognized in his budget message the need to aid small business. I am gratified that he urged Federal assistance to communities with persistent unemployment, a continuation of the Small Business Administration on a permanent basis, and tax benefits for small firms. These recommendations are of special importance to Maine.

Billboards—Mr Eisenhower gave his full support to the battle against billboards on our interstate highways when he asked for "prompt enactment" of appropriate legislation. I hope very much that the President will be vigorous in pushing this recommendation, even more vigorous than the Administration was last year.

Portland Harbor—The fiscal 1959 budget did not contain a request for funds to study deepening of Portland Harbor because the proposal was made too late last year. However I shall request such funds when these appropriations are under consideration in committee. This study should be undertaken as soon as possible.

Older Workers—I have introduced a bill in the House to encourage employers to hire and retain older workers who because of their age have been subject to deplorable discrimination in getting jobs. My legislation would provide employers with a tax credit ranging from 2 to 5 per cent of gross salary for those workers 45 or 46 years of age.

HOW TO DRIVE

A tip from the AAA's driving guide for adults.

SAVE MONEY ON GASOLINE

The way you drive has a lot to do with how much it costs you to drive. Two people driving the same car over the same route at different times may get very well nigh totally different fuel economy figures. Sudden, violent, up and down acceleration is the greatest enemy of economy. A smart driver plans ahead so he doesn't step hard on the gas or brake suddenly by looking up ahead and trying to "read" the traffic flow. By looking up ahead and trying to anticipate the action of the drivers around you, you can avoid having to step on the gas pedal or brake suddenly. Keep your car in good mechanical condition. Keep your tires properly inflated. Keep your engine tuned and your carburetor adjusted. Keep your car clean, inside and out. Keep your windows clean so you can see clearly. Keep your windshield wiper blades in good condition so you can see clearly in rain or snow. Keep your headlights clean and properly aimed so you can see clearly at night. Keep your brakes in good condition so you can stop quickly when you have to. Keep your car in good mechanical condition so you can drive safely. Keep your car clean, inside and out, so you can see clearly. Keep your windows clean so you can see clearly. Keep your windshield wiper blades in good condition so you can see clearly in rain or snow. Keep your headlights clean and properly aimed so you can see clearly at night. THE AMERICAN WAY

Watch That Foot In The Door!

to state regulations just as any other public and private school is. Teachers are required to meet the state standards for certification. The courses of study are checked to see if they meet the objectives of secondary school education. Even the sanitary facilities come under scrutiny. On the 19th and 20th of November 1957, representatives of the New England Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, together with members of the State Department of Education in Maine, were at Gould to make an appraisal.

So much for organization and academic standards. Now where does our non-contract school get its funds?

When Maine separated from Massachusetts in 1820 and became a state in its own right, it kept some of the old Massachusetts laws. One of them provides that there can be public support of private schools. In 1860 the Maine legislature granted to the trustees of Gould Academy a half township of land, situated in Aroostook county, which they sold for $7200. In 1881 when the second Academy building was erected, the citizens of Bethel contributed over $1200 to aid in furnishing it. In 1880 the state legislature granted an annuity of $800 to be continued for ten years. At the present time the fee that Gould is allowed to charge for each local student is set by the State Department of Education in Augusta. It is based on the average cost per pupil in the entire state, both in public and private schools. The amount varies according to the extra advantages the individual school has to offer. If a school offers two occupational courses such as manual arts, home economics or the commercial course, Gould offers all three, it may charge 15% above the average fee. This year the average cost for the state is $811.71 and Gould can charge $1067.76. The average operating cost per day pupil at Gould is $20.00.

It is obvious to all that such an enterprise as Gould would require far more capital to maintain itself than is supplied by public funds. After the original private gift of Rev Daniel Gould, Dr John Grover gave the sum of $20000 a perpetual fund, the interest from which can only be used for "chemical and philosophical apparatus." Over the years Gould has most gratefully accepted other endowment funds but over half of them have been earmarked for specific purposes. The total sum of all endowments is under $200,000. Income from this capital is a much appreciated addition to the public funds, but the cost of income from both sources is far from adequate to meet routine expenses.

During the last 30 years the Academy has widely expanded all of its facilities. It is fairly well known that the great extent of educational advantages offered at Gould is largely due to the generosity of the late Mr Dana Bingham Bell of Bethel. His funds having provided not only the original roster of courses but also carrying expenses. Endowment funds which he established at various colleges and to which have the specific condition that first preference be given to boys or girls from Bethel. If none can be found who meet the requirements of the scholarship in question, such scholarship reverts to some other worthy boy or girl from Oxford county and after that to someone from the state of Maine.

Gould Academy is dependent upon the generosity of its friends for the annual gifts which are necessary to balance the budget. Gifts of money, securities, real estate, bequests, and life insurance policies naming the Academy as beneficiary are welcomed. Gifts of money should be made payable to Gould Academy and sent to the Treasurer, Ralph Lowell of Boston, Mass., and the United States Trust Co of New York as to how much, if any, of its funds are to be expended for Gould Academy. In 1882 and again in 1906 the trustees of Gould Academy had an evaluation committee of distinguished and disinterested educators from out of the State examine Gould as an educational institution to see among other things if Gould was worthy of continuing to receive large financial support. The reports were favorable.

The above facts were gathered hoping that they be helpful when considering the educational problems of the town. In our present world all our lives are affected by one institution or another. No institution whether private or public is perfect. No person being human, is ever entirely satisfied. So we must evaluate a situation and find that the attractions outweigh the disadvantages, we accept it. If the opposite proves true, then we are free by using due process of law to make changes.

Slowdown in Business Only Breather, Says Gregg, N. E. C. Chairman

Hugh Gregg, Senior Council Chairman The New England Council, urges New Englanders to place the current national slowing of business activity in its proper perspective—a temporary breather in the midst of a sound economy.

"This coming year will be one of progress; a good year overall," he told the annual meeting of the Littleton (N. H.) Chamber of Commerce at Thayer Hotel.

"It will be a year of readjustment and of fence-mending too. It will be a time for re-appraisal of business operations. The result cannot help but be higher rates of efficiency and a solid base for the upturn which surely lies ahead."

Gregg, President of the Nashua millwork firm of Gregg and Son, a former President of The New England Council and former Governor of New Hampshire, stressed, however:

"Above all, we must place the economic trends in their proper perspective.

"The pessimist is ever with us. Don't fall for his hasty judgement and slipshod thinking; his quickly-formed inaccuracies.

"Every economic indicator shows a basic high level of activity, even in the face of slowing business and absence of the record-breaking figures of the previous year.

"The best economic observers are agreed that the current slight slowing will be with us — perhaps through the first half of 1958.

"But they also agree that an upturn is very much in the cards.

"There isn't one who doesn't believe 1958 will be a good year overall for New England and for the nation. And some go so far as to say a better year than the one just past.

"Nineteen fifty-seven was a good year for New England generally, despite the late lag.

"Many utilities report they hit production peaks while keeping abreast of industrial expansion.

"Atomic programs in New England pushed ahead on land and sea.

"Just as every other aspect of the economy, New England employment trends followed and are continuing to follow the national pattern.

"There was no conformance in unemployment patterns among the New England states. And I am proud to report that New Hampshire is holding the line better than any of her neighbors.

"The wide diversity of industrial

Tompkinsville, Ky., News: "Some five hundred people will be killed in the next ten days by automobiles in this country. Maybe, if some people knew the victims they would advocate safe and sane driving."
